

www.travelmole.com/news_feature.php New report reveals sustainable tourism is now gaining massive momentum with airlines, tour operators, trains, destinations and travelers.

Using case studies, statistics, interviews and news reports - the latest Sustainable Tourism Report clearly illustrates the advances that sustainable tourism has made during the year and the latest methods that are effectively being applied by all major players in the industry. The report details just how we have got to this take-off point in the 22 years since the movement began, where we are now and what the future holds.

It reveals how and why airlines are reducing their environmental footprints; integrating sustainable development into their products and services, promoting responsible human resources policies and contributing to their arrival destinations.
